

Cultural Capital Microlending Program Application

1056 Brown Street, Dayton, Ohio 45409

Our Background:

The Greater West Dayton Incubator was conceived at the intersections of the University of Dayton's most recent strategic visioning process and intentional conversations with Greater West Dayton community leaders. The Greater West Dayton Incubator serves as a pathway for neighborhood entrepreneurs into the region's startup economy. Recently, the GWDI has partnered with Flyer Consulting Microlending, a student-run organization that provides entrepreneurial mentorship and business development services locally and internationally. Together, the organizations have developed the Cultural Capital Microlending Program.

Our Mission:

Guided by the University of Dayton's Marianist values and community needs, the Cultural Capital Microlending Program is committed to mitigating historical power imbalances. Through the GWDI and Flyer Consulting Microlending, the Cultural Capital Microlending Program provides capital development, loan application assistance, and support services. We implement strategies that are individualized with historically under-resourced, underrepresented, and marginalized entrepreneurs in mind.

As a source of microcredit, our role is to provide funds for businesses that may not be able to secure funds from a traditional bank or from the Small Business Administration. This is implemented through a holistic set of criteria, processes, and products that emphasize impact contributions on under-resourced entrepreneurs, innovators, and creatives. In the spirit of the Catholic Social Teaching, the program utilizes additional services and considerations for low-income residents, main street and lifestyle businesses, and social ventures that advance the common good by operating in geographically disinvested areas in Greater West Dayton. Preference is also given to entrepreneurs and business owners who have participated in one of the other GWDI programs and/or services. Greater consideration is given to businesses that have not previously received a microloan through this program.
